Thug Shoots Woman in a Burial Place

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—Mrs. Leon Guggenheim, an elderly woman, whose husband is president of a local oil company, was shot by a robber yesterday while strewing flowers on the grave of her son in the Home of Peace cemetery, near Colma. The shot passed through her shoulder and inflicted a painful wound. The thug escaped into the hills with her purse, containing a small amount of coin. Poses are now hunting the man on both sides of the county line.

REMAINS OF THE MISSING GIRL WAS FOUND IN OCEAN

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—The body of Miss May Ilg, who disappeared from her home in San Francisco on July 17, was found floating in the ocean one and one-half miles north of Bolinas and about ten miles north of San Francisco late yesterday. The body was positively identified as that of Miss Ilg by William Ilg, the young woman's brother, who was summoned from his home at San Francisco.

The body yielded no clue as to the cause of the young woman's disappearance. The sleeve jacket was torn and two teeth were broken, but the remains showed no other marks of violence.

Deputy Coroner J. R. Keaton said he believed the young woman took her own life, but offered no grounds for the belief other than the lack of signs of violence.

Miss Ilg was 23 years old. She left her parents' home saying she was going to secure tickets at a local theater. Search by police and private detectives which followed her failure to return did not reveal any plausible explanation of her disappearance which is still left unsolved by the finding of her body.

SAN RAFAEL, Cal., July 29.—An autopsy on the body of May Gertrude Ilg, found in the ocean near Bolinas last night, failed to show any signs of violence.

BOY WHO GRADUATES FROM BUNGVILLE HAS AN AWFUL
TIME IN LEAGUE.

At the Butler tonight a big program of pictures and vaudeville will be shown. Duncan and Moran will be heard in a new vaudeville turn, introducing singing and dancing. The pictures are "A New Faith," (a Selig Roman story); "Jimmy's Trick," (comedy); "An Oasis on the Sahara Desert," (a beautiful scenic picture), and "Captain Kate," the daughter of a wild animal trainer. This is the most interesting picture shown for a long time, showing lots of wild animals. Starting at the matinee tomorrow, Lavelle and Rosamond, a very clever team of singers, termed the fashion plates, open a week's engagement at this popular place of amusement. The pictures for tomorrow are as follows: "The Perfume Clue," (drama); "Reviewing French Troops," (a very clever military picture); "The White Medicine Man," (an Indian comedy drama, and a feature comedy picture, entitled "The Baseball Star of Bungville."

This is a comedy picture and tells the story of the country boy who makes his debut in the big league and the time he has is something awful.

All kinds of riling and blinding at the Bonanza.

The mayor said:
"It is contrary to the first principles of government to put public officers in the employ of private individuals, to be paid by them and directed in the performance of their duty by them."

Belief Current That Germany's Attitude In
Matter May Cause Continental War So
Often Threatened During Recent Years—
Political Opponents Unite In Speeches.

LONDON, July 29.—The most pessimistic view regarding the acuteness of the Moroccan crisis was confirmed by the prime minister in the house of commons when he read from a manuscript which had been carefully prepared, a warning to Germany that Great Britain proposed to stand for what she considered her rights and to maintain a balance of power in Europe.

Further testimony as to the gravity of the situation was given by the fact that the prime minister had obviously taken the leader of the opposition into the government's confidence and Balfour's declaration was no less firm than Asquith's. The prime minister's statement was couched in diplomatic, though not reassuring language.

At the very opening it said: "It is obvious this Moroccan question has reached a point at which it has become increasingly difficult, embarrassing and anxious unless a solution is found."

Later he said: "We thought it right from the beginning to make clear that failing a settlement such as I have indicated, we must become an active party in the discussion of the situation. That will be our right according to the assignatory treaty of Algeiras, and might be an obligation under the terms of the agreement of 1904 with France. It might be that our duty in defense of British interests would be directly affected by further developments."

In promising the support of the opposition to the government, Balfour said: "If there be any who has supposed we are wiped off the map of Europe because we have our difficulties at home, it will be worth while saying they have bitterly mistaken the temper of the British people and the patriotism of the opposition."

Such plain speaking on the question is fraught with possibilities of a great European war not heard in the British parliament for years. The outcome of the situation appears to rest almost wholly on Germany's shoulders. If, as some German papers say, Germany has reached a stage of national development where the necessities of her population demand that she branch into foreign fields and impose conditions on France which Great Britain thinks threatened her vital interests, the only result, so far as those best informed see it, will be the oft-threatened and long-averted European convulsion.

Balfour strongly hinted at what the general feeling is—that Germany thought she could take advantage of the crisis in Great Britain's domestic politics in the belief that it would be so absorbing to the country that the people would not pay attention to foreign affairs. British newspapers are united in supporting the government. They write in studiously polite language but strongly urge Germany not to be permitted to make any African incursion that would seriously damage Great Britain's national interests.

The first division of the home fleet, stationed at Portland, was ordered to coal and complete its supplies with coal and fuel this morning. Operations continued throughout the night.

DISCUSSION OF I. W. W. CAUSES HOT ARGUMENTS

BUTTE, Mont., July 29.—A large portion of the time of the Western Federation of Miners' convention was taken up yesterday by discussion of the proposal to deprive the federation organizations of the privilege of holding and voting proxies at conventions. The discussion was heated, especially after the explosion of a bomb by Joseph Cannon, in the shape of a letter that is stated to have been written several years ago by Vincent St. John, head of the Industrial Workers of the World organization of Chicago, and sent to one of his followers in California. Cannon read the letter to prove his assertion that the Industrial Workers had attempted by machine methods and by securing proxies to capture the Western Federation convention at Denver in the year 1909.

This move of the so-called revolutionary element of the federation was denounced and there was warm response by representatives of that element to the effect that they are constantly being "hebbled and gagged" in convention proceedings chiefly by a machine controlled by the present organization and federation officers. After lengthy discussion the proposition was voted down.
